NEO TECHNOLOGIES, INC. AWARDED
SMALL BUSINESS CONTRACTOR OF THE YEAR
USDA Recognizes Outstanding Information Technology Supplier

(Baltimore, Md.—July 8, 2010) The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) awarded Neo Technologies, Inc. the Office of Inspector General’s HUBZone Small Business 2010 Contractor of the Year award. A ceremony, presented by the Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization, was held June 16 at the USDA’s Washington, D.C., headquarters.

President Ronald D. Curry was recognized for his leadership in a company that strives to provide outstanding information technology equipment and supplies. Neo Technologies, Inc. was nominated by the Office of the Inspector General, and shared the recognition with four national businesses.

The annual Small Business and AbilityOne Award Program is designed to acknowledge the outstanding work of small businesses in the agriculture community that have provided exemplary services to the USDA.

“My company has provided information technology equipment and supplies to many locations at the Office of Inspector General,” Curry states. “We stand by our reliable track record for great service, timely deliveries and quick turnaround on any query.”

Neo Technologies, Inc. is a computer hardware maintenance firm that specializes in office equipment, network and graphic printers, and document management solutions. The firm was founded in 1990 and supplies equipment to a roster of federal and commercial clients.

Neo Technologies' philosophy is to provide cost-effective, streamlined solutions for its clients' information technology needs. To learn more about the company, visit www.neotechs.com.
